About the Conference

Bath Ruby will be a one day, non-profit, single track conference for Ruby developers of all skill levels. The focus of the talks will be on learning new skills, techniques and best practices.

We're fortunate enough to have some of the Ruby community's favourite speakers joining us for the day and are therefore confident that interest in the conference will be high and tickets will sell well.

Since we're not organising this to make a profit, we can afford to keep ticket prices down and 10% of ticket sales will be donated to Shelter.

With up to 500 attendees from the UK, Europe and beyond, this promises to be the UK's largest Ruby conference.

The Location

Bath

One of England's premiere historical cities, Bath provides a unique and sought-after conference venue. A World Heritage Site and spa destination, it was the weekend retreat of choice for high-class Londoners during 19th Century and is now the same for tourists from around the world.

With its splendid Georgian architecture and with beautiful countryside surrounding the city, it's small enough to walk around and has a wide choice of excellent restaurants and shops. Home to international music, literature, food and film festivals, other famous visitor attractions are the Roman Baths and top club, Bath Rugby. One of its most well-known residents was author, Jane Austen.

For the conference-goer, at approximately 100 miles west of London and 13 miles from Bristol, it offers excellent transport links via road, train, and nearby Bristol airport and London airports. It also enjoys a wide selection of accommodation.

The Assembly Rooms

The Assembly Rooms are part of a stunning Grade I listed building, dating back to 1771. Adorned with the original Whitefriars crystal chandeliers and housing portraits by Gainsborough, Ramsey and Hoare.

The Bath stone building has four main function rooms arranged in a U shape: the 100-foot-long (30m) ballroom — the largest Georgian interior in Bath; the tea room; the card room; and the octagon.

We'll be making full use of this beautiful space; conference talks will take place in the ballroom, breaks will be in the tea room & card room and sponsors' exhibition space will occupy the octagon.
